

Managers and Leaders Course 2021

Deep Diving into Foundation Subjects

Wednesday 3 March 2021 - 9.30am-3.00pm
with Chris Quigley

Course Outline

For many years, curriculum design in primary schools has focused on making content real, relevant, engaging and fun. Whilst there is nothing wrong with any of these things there has been a huge shift towards one of the biggest problems with learning: unless something is remembered in the long term it hasn't been learned; it has been experienced, and just because the curriculum is real, relevant, engaging or fun doesn't mean that it will be learned.

Take a journey with Chris Quigley to deep dive into the foundation subjects. Fully review your curriculum's intent, implementation and impact by;

- Exploring every aspect of curriculum design through 14 questions and example answers
- Learning about the latest research evidence around effective curriculum design
- Confidently answering questions about curriculum principles, sequencing and progression
- Exploring questions for senior leaders, curriculum leaders, class teachers and students which mean that you look at your curriculum from all angles.

This research based course responds to the thinking that underpins Ofsted's deep dives into curriculum design. The course will help you to articulate how your curriculum is designed for long term memory.

If you would like an evidence-informed deep dive into curriculum design with professional videos, clear slides, a reading list, example curriculum policy and a subject effectiveness template then this online course is for you.

The cost of this course is usually £175
